H. Hrg. 115-16 - Challenges Facing Law Enforcement in the 21st Century

<https://www.govinfo.gov/app/details/CHRG-115hrg30234/CHRG-115hrg30234>

Each of us knows that our law enforcement officers across the Nation dedicate our lives and their lives to the precept which undergirds our country, and that is respect for, and adherence to, the rule of law. Policing in America has never been more complex, because law enforcement officers are the first responders to some of America's more complex and greatest social challenges, whether it is the growing opioid epidemic, the emerging threat of cyber terrorism, homegrown extremism, or the growing prevalence of mental illness across our nation. These are the 21st Century challenges that we must meet together.

Battle of Gettysburg

<https://www.loc.gov/item/today-in-history/july-01?loclr=eatod#the-battle-of-gettysburg>

Both armies suffered devastating losses on the first day of battle, but Union losses proved much greater. While the first day of the battle was counted a Confederate victory, the tide turned on July 2 and came to be viewed as a turning point to the Civil War.

*So it ends, this lesser battle of the first day,
Starkly disputed and piecemeal won and lost
By corps-commanders who carried no magic plans
Stowed in their sleeves, but fought and held as they could.*

*It is past. The board is staked for the greater game
Which is to follow...*

John Brown's Body, by Stephen Vincent Benet.
(Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday, Doran, 1928), 294.

July 2, 1863  Battle of Gettysburg  https://www.loc.gov/item/today-in-history/july-02?loclr=eatod	This day, tragic for both sides, ended with Union victory. They say the noise was incessant as the sound  Of all wolves howling, when that attack came on.  They say, when the guns all spoke, that the solid  ground  Of the rocky ridges trembled like a sick child.  John Brown's Body, by Stephen Vincent Benet.  (Garden City, New York: Doubleday, Doran, 1928),  299-300.
July 2, 1881  President Garfield Assassinated  https://www.loc.gov/item/today-in-history/july-02?loclr=eatod	Charles Guiteau shoots newly inaugurated U.S. President James Garfield. Guiteau blamed Garfield for not selecting him for a job at the U.S. Consulate in Paris. His trial was the first to use insanity as a defense in criminal court. Nevertheless, he was found guilty and hanged on June 30, 1882.
July 3, 1863  Pickett's Charge  https://www.loc.gov/item/today-in-history/july-03/	The attack, commonly known as Pickett's Charge or Longstreet's Assault, was an attempt to penetrate the center of Union forces on Cemetery Ridge. During the attack, only one Confederate brigade temporarily reached the top of the ridge—afterwards called the high watermark of the Confederacy—led by Brigadier General Lewis Armistead who, just before being shot, yelled, "Give them cold steel, boys!" The charge ultimately proved disastrous for the Confederates, with casualties approaching 60 percent. As a consequence, Confederate General Robert E. Lee was forced to retreat and ultimately abandon his attempt to reach Washington, D.C. via Pennsylvania.
July 11, 1804  A Tragic Duel  https://www.loc.gov/item/today-in-history/july-11/	Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr met to settle their longstanding differences with a duel. Hamilton was fatally wounded. This tragically extreme incident reflected the depth of animosity aroused by the first emergence of the nation's political party system.

Menches conceived the idea of filling a pastry with two scoops of ice cream, and thereby invented the ice cream cone. Albeit, more than one person claims to have invented the ice cream cone. At the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904, a cone made from a rolled waffle, vaulted into popularity in the United States.
July 27, 1946  Gertrude Stein Dies  https://www.loc.gov/item/today-in-history/july-27	Avant-garde writer and art connoisseur Gertrude Stein died in France. Stein enjoyed a reputation both as a cultural figure and for her circle of friends, among them, Hemingway, Picasso, Matisse, John Dos Passos, F. Scott Fitzgerald. She observed to Hemingway, "you are all a lost generation".
